Academic calendar features important dates, student art

FRANKLIN, TENN. – Williamson County students and parents can keep track of important school dates and get insight into living healthier lives with Williamson Medical Center’s 24th annual academic calendar.

The 2010-2011 calendar features 13 pieces of art created by students in nine public and private high schools in Williamson County. Selected artwork will be on display at the Medical Center for one year.

Steve Dycus, Marketing and Public Relations director, says the calendar lists important dates for all schools in Williamson County and especially is helpful for parents who have children attending different schools.

“More importantly, the calendar provides health information for people of all ages and encourages them to take a more active role in their health care,” he says.

Students whose artwork is featured in the calendar are Ashlee Barnes, Middle College High School; Christine Hibma, Page High School; Jenna Hiebert, Brentwood High School; Alysa Ilchert, Brentwood High School; Jessica Jestings, Brentwood Academy; Angela Kim, Ravenwood High School; Jessie Maurer, Benton Hall Academy; Parker McCracken, Brentwood Academy; Sage Miller, Brentwood High School; Alexandra Pitzer, Battle Ground Academy; Suzanna Thompson, Centennial High School; Mary Julia Tunnell, Brentwood Academy; and Emma Widman, Franklin High School.

More than 50,000 calendars are being distributed to schools and the community this month.
